OTTMAR LIEBERT
1 February 1959
Cologne, West Germany

“Flamenco is a music both romantic and dangerous; it is an attitude as much as it is a musical genre.”

Born in Cologne, West Germany to a Chinese-German father and a Hungarian mother, Liebert spent most of his childhood travelling throughout Europe and Asia with his family. At 11, he began playing classical guitar and graduated to flamenco guitar at 14 after he "found a Flamenco LP in the bargain bin at a local supermarket".

After performing rock music in his native country, Liebert moved to the US and lived in Boston for a few years, performing in local clubs. Settling in Santa Fe, NM in 1986, Liebert began looking to create a new musical sound. In 1992 he bought a mountaintop ranch overlooking the city. It had an adobe guesthouse and he built a recording studio there.

Liebert says his music is influenced by "Carlos Santana, Paco de Lucía, John McLaughlin, Robert Fripp, and Jeff Beck; others were horn players like Miles Davis". He continues, "others yet were fine artists who taught me about space and brush strokes and dynamics and contrast".

In 1989 Liebert founded the first incarnation of his band Luna Negra (black moon) and recorded a self-produced album, Marita: Shadows and Storms. The first 1000 copies were sold in a Santa Fe art gallery. Eventually, radio stations played it and because of listener response, Higher Octave Music picked it up and released a remastered version renamed Nouveau Flamenco the following year.

The album was double-Platinum in the US.

Several successful albums followed and expanded his sound: Borrasca (1991), Solo Para Ti (1992), and The Hours Between Night + Day (1993), all three earning Gold certification. Liebert's international success continued with ¡Viva! (1995) and Opium (1996), both achieved Platinum status in the US and Latin America.

Recording with Luna Negra since 1989, band personnel changed regularly with the only constant being bassist Jon Gagan.

Ottmar Liebert has released 25 albums that includes live releases, Christmas CDs, 15 CDs of original music, a DVD, and various remixes. He has received 38 Gold and Platinum certifications in the US, as well as certifications in Canada, Australia and New Zealand.
